Service-Learning

Introduction

Service-Learning is a pedagogical strategy that allows students to apply discipline-based knowledge to authentic and practical situations beyond the classroom. It integrates community service, academic learning, and civic engagement. Students provide valuable community service while at the same time reinforcing the theories, attitudes, and values of a course. The sites below provide information on using Service-Learning in many disciplines.

General Resources

Resources for Faculty: Campus Compact.
Provides online toolkits for those new to Service-Learning, syllabi by discipline, assessment tools, and many other resources for using Service-Learning in higher education.
http://compact.org/resources-for-faculty/

International Journal of Teaching and Learning in Higher Education, Volume 18, Number One, Special Issue: Future Directions for Service Learning in Higher Education.
This focused issue of IJTLHE provides full text of service learning articles on both research and instructional issues.
http://www.isetl.org/ijtlhe/past2.cfm?v=18&i=1

Back to top

These resources were compiled and annotated by Lois Rosen, Ph.D., Instructional Consultant for the Office of Faculty and Organizational Development, Michigan State University.