Scholarship of Teaching and Learning (SoTL)

Introduction

The Scholarship of Teaching and Learning promotes teaching as a scholarly endeavor and a worthy subject for research, producing a public body of knowledge open to critique and evaluation. Its intent is not only to improve teaching but to create a community of “scholarly teachers” who add to the body of knowledge about teaching and learning as well as benefiting from the SoTL research of others. This section provides links to introductory information, articles, examples, journals, conferences, associations, and other resources dedicated to SoTL. Faculty members new to SoTL and those who are already engaged in SoTL activities will find useful information in this compilation.

What is SoTL?

“The Scholarship of Teaching,” Eileen Bender (Indiana University South Bend) and Donald Gray (Indiana University Bloomington).
This article is an introduction to SoTL as reflective practice in which “we invest in our teaching the intellectual powers we practice in our research.” Contains links to articles on SoTL from Indiana University’s Research and Creative Activity, Vol. 22, No. 1, April 1999.

What is the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning?, University of Central Florida.
In addition to offering several definitions of SoTL from institutions around the U.S., this site is a gateway to many additional online resources, including extensive listings of SoTL journals, articles and resources to download, SoTL posters, and other links.

SoTL: The Legacy of Ernest Boyer, The Gwenna Moss Centre for Teaching Effectiveness, University of Saskatchewan, Canada.
Concise and lucid summary of Ernest Boyer’s Scholarship Reconsidered, in which he proposed that teaching can be scholarly work if the same exacting standards of evaluation used in research are applied to the classroom.

Doing SoTL

How could I do scholarship of teaching & learning?: Selected Examples of Several of the Different Genres of SoTL,” Craig Nelson (Indiana University).
An annotated bibliography of SoTL readings and online resources organized into five different kinds of research into teaching and learning. Also includes a list of basic references on doing SoTL research.

The Gallery of Teaching and Learning, Carnegie Foundation.
Browse this website for examples of teaching and learning as scholarly work: collections, exhibitions, and case studies.

Vanderbilt University’s Center for Teaching SoTL Website.
This well organized site answers questions new users will have such as “What Is SoTL?” and “How Is SoTL Done?” Provides a gallery of SoTL projects, ways to go public, qualitative and quantitative methods for SoTL research, and more.

SoTL: Designing and Beginning (University of Central Florida Faculty Center for Teaching and Learning).
A worksheet, almost a tutorial, for those new to SoTL. Guides an instructor through picking a topic, choosing its scope, and the actual research design. Discussion of inductive and deductive SoTL research is accompanied by questions to guide the research design.

Ohio Learning Network: Scholarship of Teaching and Learning.
Another collection of useful links with plenty of examples of “SoTL ideas that work,” including some online SoTL presentations.
