Adams Academy

The Adams Academy is named in honor of former MSU President Walter Adams and his wife and MSU faculty emeriti, Pauline Adams, in recognition of their sustained commitments to promote instructional excellence. The program, now in its sixth year, brings together a cross-disciplinary group of instructors for a yearlong fellowship focused on teaching and learning. Adams Academy participants explore the scholarship on effective university teaching and learning practices and consider how this robust body of research can be used to guide instructional decisions in the courses they teach. Participants learn from and contribute to a community of teacher-scholars committed to excellence in teaching and learning. Up to fifteen Adams Academy members will be selected for the 2014-2015 cohort. Criteria for selection include evidence of the applicant’s interest in and commitment to teaching and learning, potential to be an excellent teacher, and potential and willingness to serve as a mentor and advocate for excellent teaching among peers. The Adams Academy will be facilitated by the Director of Faculty and Instructional Development Programs in the Office of Faculty and Organizational Development.
